

Beaded Dragons

The Beaded Dragon is a medium size lizard from Central Australia. They are called Bearded Dragons because their heads have spikes on them. They have triangle heads, round bodies and short legs. Their color depends on where they are living. They can be brown or tan with red and gold highlights. They can grow up to 2 feet long. The female dragon can lay 20 eggs at a time. The Bearded Dragon walks around like lizards do. These lizards are not very fast. To catch food they camouflage themselves and wait for their prey. They eat most types of insects, fruits and leaves. The Bearded Dragon protects itself by puffing its neck out and jumping around.

By Tucker Gibson